The consultants took the Commission through an exercise, asking Commissioners to offer a headline for what they would like to see in Dubuque in 10 years. Commissioners offered the following: Dubuque on Target to reduce greenhouse gas by 50% by 2030; City of Dubuque falls 25% below legal debt limit; Dubuque hosts Para-Olympics at the new Millwork District Park; Dubuque is the best place to own a bicycle; Dubuque develops a great workforce; and Dubuque MRT Side Trip route completed.

The consultants asked the Commission to discuss current opportunities and threats in the community toward our environmental/ecological integrity. The Commission and staff identified opportunities such as the need to improve multi-modal east west transportation in the city, past efforts to develop an aquatics center, implementation of the Catfish Creek Watershed Management Plan, better grade separation with the railroads, improved air quality, the South Port and other riverfront master plans as opportunities. The Commission noted threats include lead poisoning in the community, the current state of sewer infrastructure is old and undersized, the potential for flooding of Chaplain Schmitt Island, and the need for a plan in the event of a levee or flood wall breach.

The consultants asked the Commission to discuss current opportunities and threats in the community toward our economic prosperity. The Commission and staff identified workforce shortages, skills gaps and wage gaps that have been recently studied and reported as threats toward economic development. They also noted the need to provide workforce housing and reduce poverty. The Commission noted the importance of having the right people with the right skills in the right places in order to grow our economy. They identified opportunities such as the Southwest Arterial and surrounding development, the importance of our educational institutions in recruiting and retaining businesses, and the productivity of people in the Dubuque area as an opportunity noting John Deere as an example. They also noted the river and historic resources are big opportunities for our economic wellbeing as historic resources are a draw for tourism.

The consultants asked the Commission to discuss current opportunities and threats in the community toward our social/cultural vibrancy. The Commission discussed the arts community, artwork, Riverwalk, River Museum, Art on the River, Arts Master Plan, and Art Museum as opportunities. The Commission identified threats include crime noting people's different perceptions of crime, homelessness, a lack of affordable housing, and concentration of assisted housing noting it is mostly concentrated downtown. The Commission identified distributing a variety of affordable housing, the health community need assessment study and health plan, maintaining great hospitals and health care, and more healthy local foods would be opportunities. The Commission noted there's a better opportunity for residents to make better lifestyle decisions. Staff noted a threat would be the affordability of quality food as there's a greater disparity of availability of healthy food options for low income people.

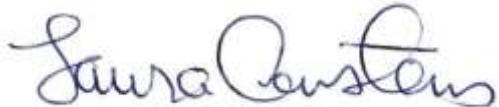

The consultants gave the Commissioners a homework assignment due in one month. They handed out project cards and paperwork. The Commission was requested to help promote the planning process, take a picture and upload to the project website, propose groups they think should be engaged, and think about and share their vision for Dubuque.

Commissioner Pregler reiterated the importance of making sure the Commission stays engaged as much as possible, noting Commissioners should participate where and when they can and want. He noted that this is the citizens' plan and having engagement from the citizen board members will help with support and buy-in.

ADJOURNMENT: Motion by Vincent, seconded by Pregler to adjourn the meeting. Motion carried by the following vote: Aye - Vincent, Winterwood, Dolson, Pregler and Darter; Nay - None.

The meeting was adjourned at 6:00 p.m.

Respectfully submitted,
